

Rector

DR. TAMÁS FÜLÖP

I obtained my university degree and scientific qualification at the Faculty of Humanities of the University of Debrecen in the fields of humanities and education. My research is fundamentally related to the history of politics, economy and society, as well as the history of settlement development and public administration, as well as family history research, community organization, and public education.

I began my higher education career at Szolnok College. I took on a role in the development of education and curriculum, student talent management, science organization, and I contributed to institutional accreditation procedures.

Director of the Jász-Nagykun-Szolnok County Archives (2008-2013). Deputy Director General of the Hungarian National Archives responsible for county archives (2013-2016).

I have been working at the Neumann János University in Kecskemét since 2016.

Between 2016-2017, he was the vice-rector for science.

Between 2017-2019, he was the dean of the Faculty of Teacher Training.

Since 2019, he has been the rector of Neumann János University.

Professional leader of several domestic and international competitions

Member of several professional and scientific organizations, public bodies, and editorial boards.

From 2021, he will also be a lecturer at the Doctoral School of History and Ethnography of the University of Debrecen.

Research areas

My research is fundamentally related to the professional field of economics and social sciences, the topics of economic, political, and ideological history, supplemented by the history of settlement development and public administration, as well as the topics of community organization, family history, public education, and social capital.